Second Annual Bay Area Loft Jazz Festival

Dave Widelock & Lejimda, Ed Mock, and The Smith Dobson Quintet come to Fort Mason Center, Sunday, March 9, as part of the Second Annual Bay Area Loft Jazz Festival.

Ken Schubert, who founded Bay Area Loft Jazz in 1976, hopes the festival will help local artists by promoting jazz concerts non-commercially. He wants to bring the public a broad spectrum of jazz as well as offer a unique opportunity for artist and audience to get to know one another.

David Widelock has established himself as a venerable, classical jazz guitarist, and his quartet includes Lejimda on vocals, Leon Fernandez on brass, and Jim Reynolds on percussion.

Ed Mock, coming home from the Vienna Dance Festival, brings his highly personal form of jazz dance to the festival, and if he comes close to last year's performance for BALJ, he will be a delight.

The Smith Dobson Quintet rounds out the day with their myriad arrangements of classical to contemporary jazz. The swing starts at 1 pm in Bldg. C, Center For World Music.

Bay Area Small Press Bookfair

The Bay Area Small Press Bookfair scheduled for Saturday & Sunday, March 22-23 at Fort Mason Center is so unusual in concept and planning that it might change the look and function of bookfairs, large and small, for some time to come. The two-day multi-cultural event which opens at Noon on Sat., March 22, will be free to the public, and yet will still function as a benefit. There will be video coverage of guest celebrity appearances, live prose and poetry for the deaf with dozens of interpreters and video, musical and film entertainment.

Some 100 small presses, seventy five percent from California and the Bay Area, the rest from throughout the U.S. & Canada, will be represented at the Bookfair. Maurice Custodio, President of the S.F. Arts & Letters, a non-profit multi-cultural arts organization, said, "I wanted this to be different from all other, somewhat dull bookfairs, so I appointed a novelist and poet Todd S.J. Lawson, a former small press editor, coordinator—and the innovations are incredible!"

Custodio said most bookfairs are charging admission to the public, gouging literary presses for hundreds of dollars for tables where often only one book is on display. "We are going to prove that a regional bookfair can be successful, lively, open to the public without admission and culturally stimulating," he stated. All this is being done with the cooperation and help of Fort Mason Center, the California Arts Council, Coordinating Council of Literary Magazines, the Zellerbach Family Fund and numerous Bay Area businesses & celebrities.

The fair will include never before seen interviews on video-tape of Attorney Melvin Belli, Coyote organizer Margo St. James, Mayor Dianne Feinstein, author-longshoreman Eric Hoffer, the incomparable Scott Beach, and many more. Translators & interpreters for the deaf will be available for most of the progams.

The Bookfair will also include such Bay Area small presses as The SF Review of Books, Yardbird Publishing of Berkeley, Manroot of South SF, Trinity Press of SF, Floating Island of Point Reyes, The Happy Booker of Concord, Goodfellow Catalog in Berk., Small Press Distribution of Kensington and Tumba Press, also of Berkeley—names probably not too familiar to most Random House or Harper & Row readers, but quite creative & independent. As Coordinator Lawson stated, "It gave me a great deal of pleasure to refuse space to those larger presses who usually buy up all the tables and put on fancy displays, leaving the small presses who have neither the money or hype to compete, out in the cold. I love small press publications and the way they celebrate. We're not just sales & computers. We really care about the written word."

The Bookfair hours are Sat., 3/22, 12-5 PM, Sun., 3/23, 12-6 PM, Bldgs. D & E. Wheelchair access.
